FINANCIAL REPORTING ADVISORY SERVICES

RELIABLE, COMPETENT,
TAILORED SOLUTIONS

In the midst of an uncertain and challenging economic environment, the need for a strong and compliant financial reporting function to support business decisions and comply with regulations remains at the top of the agenda for organisations worldwide. To remain accountable to stakeholders, management and directors need to understand the accounting implications of business decisions and transactions.

However, the job for directors, companies and finance teams to keep up to date with developments in the commercial and regulatory landscape becomes ever more challenging as the economic environment and financial reporting regulations continue to evolve and escalate in complexity.

"You can rely on us to deliver up-to-date, competent and reliable financial reporting solutions that are framed and interpreted in accordance with your unique business situation and needs, which can be communicated concisely to your key stakeholders."

SOLUTIONS FOR YOU

The Moore Stephens LLP, Singapore, financial reporting advisory team can provide a range of services to help your organisation deal with complex and evolving accounting challenges. We can help you assess the consequences of impending regulatory changes, and manage the heightened expectations coming from management, investors, regulators and other stakeholders. We can also help you deal with financial reporting policy and operational issues arising from mergers, acquisitions and divestitures. We can provide regular updates and training to help your finance professionals as well as key stakeholders such as directors and audit committees, CFOs, and investors to understand upcoming financial reporting changes and the impact they have on your company.

Companies today are no longer able to rely on their independent auditors to provide advice for accounting issues, due to the independence requirements for auditors. Companies and management must seek alternative means to secure the right skillsets to stay ahead of the financial reporting regulatory changes and deal with complex issues. The need for such expertise escalates as your business grows and becomes more complex and engages in transactions that present financial reporting issues of intensifying complexity. Such expertise can be either in-house or outsourced.

Maintaining the team of ready in-house experts that is needed to deal with such issues can become a challenging proposition for companies that must manage both the requirements of lowering cost as well as retaining and enhancing regulatory talent. In these cases, the right advisor can be the solution that balances both considerations. You can rely on the Moore Stephens LLP,

Singapore, accounting advisory team for quality, dependable and technically competent advice to deal with financial reporting issues under both Singapore Financial Reporting Standards (SFRS) and International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS).

Beyond mere advisory services, we can also provide direct support for your finance team in the implementation of complex financial reporting processes, such as development of organisational accounting policy documentation, creation of uniquely-designed tools and templates to implement new financial reporting and disclosure requirements, performance of GAAP conversion and reconciliation, development and delivery of tailored training programs for in-house finance teams, complex financial statements preparation (e.g. "carve-out" accounting), operational support for complex accounting processes in respect of areas such as hedging, business combinations, pension plans, share-based payments and complex financial investments. We can provide a cost-effective solution for finance teams which may not find it viable to maintain a highly-specialised team for executing such complex processes that only occur on a relatively infrequent basis.
